Design. JSON-LD is designed around the concept of a "context" to provide additional mappings from JSON to an RDF model. The context links object properties in a JSON document to concepts in an ontology. In order to map the JSON-LD syntax to RDF, JSON-LD allows values to be coerced to a specified type or to be tagged with a language.

No. The JSON should all be data, and if you include a comment, then it will be data too. You could have a designated data element called "_comment" (or something) that would be ignored by apps that use the JSON data.. You would probably be better having the comment in the processes that generates/receives the JSON, as they are supposed to know what the JSON data will be in advance, or at least ...

Since its inception, JSON has quickly become the de facto standard for information exchange. Chances are you're here because you need to transport some data from here to there. Perhaps you're gathering information through an API or storing your data in a document database. One way or another, you're up to your neck in JSON, and you've got to Python your way out.

Not everything works for content type application/json.. If you are using Ext JS form submit to upload file, be aware that the server response is parsed by the browser to create the document for the <iframe>.. If the server is using JSON to send the return object, then the Content-Type header must be set to text/html in order to tell the browser to insert the text unchanged into the document body.
